

Suzanne Porter, founder of clik-trip

Originally trained as a sociologist, Suzanne discovered photography after breaking her back in a boating accident. During a long rehabilitation whilst learning to walk again, she signed up for a photography course. Suzanne went on to become an accomplished photographer with a profound interest in worldwide cultures, working to bring awareness to social issues with humanitarian organisations such as WaterAid, CARE, and Médecins Sans Frontières.

Tipped as a 'Shooting Star' by British Journal of Photography, Suzanne's work has graced the covers of international newspapers and travel magazines. Bouncing between fine art and editorial, she has enjoyed numerous exhibitions including at the British Museum and the iconic hotel La Mamounia in Marrakech now has a floor dedicated to her work.

In 2006, Suzanne bought a crumbling riad (traditional house) in the ancient Marrakech medina from where she split her time between travel commissions and running photography tours. Her tours really took people off the beaten path to discover a Morocco that only a local knows...

Suzanne learned from her customers that the primary problems when seeking the best photography tours were hours of research and guesswork. She wanted to help them find high quality tours, similar to those she was offering so using her worldwide contacts and expertise, in 2019 clik-trip was launched.

clik-trip is a curated photography marketplace, connecting people to recommended local photographers and unique photo experiences, around the world. With over 75 photographers in almost 50 countries (and more signing up every month), wherever you're going, whatever you like photographing, there's sure to be something for everyone:
